Christ Church, Falkirk, finding aid

Scottish Episcopal Church

Following an appeal in April 1862, about one hundred people promised to support the building of an Episcopal Church for Falkirk. The land was given by William Forbes of Callendar House, Falkirk and the foundation stone was laid on 18th May 1863. Sir Robert Rowan Anderson, a leading Scottish architect of the nineteenth century – who was also an Episcopalian – designed the Church. The building is large enough to seat 120 comfortably but small and compact in design, thus not a huge drain on financial resources. The Church was consecrated on 13th April 1864, having cost £1,350.
