Falkirk District Council Finding Aid (4)

Development Services

The finding aid for the records of Falkirk District Council has been divided into 7 parts. This part contains a list of the records of planning, building control, environmental health and other related functions.

Between 1975 and 1996 under the two tiered local authority structure, Districts had responsibilities for local planning, development control, urban development, industrial development, listed buildings and ancient monuments, conservation areas, building control, and environmental health. In 1975 Falkirk District Council set up four departments to deal with these functions: Architectural Services, Building Control, Planning & Environment and Environmental Health. These were brought under a single department called Development Services in the 1980s. It was re-named Strategic Services in the 1990s.

Building Control

Local council building control sections were responsible for the administration of building standard regulations (which were set by the Secretary of State for Scotland and approved by Parliament). The regulations apply to the construction, alteration, extension, demolition or change of use of a building. Building Control under Falkirk District Council was governed by the Building (Scotland) Act 1959, as amended by the Building (Scotland) Act 1970. The section was initially part of the Strategic Services Department and later was moved to form part of Leisure and Environment, later renamed Community and Environmental Services.

Access arrangements

Building warrant plans are held in an off-site store and are uncatalogued. Researchers should contact Building Standards for reference numbers and give three days advance notice for access to these plans.

Planning & Environment

The Planning & Environment section of Falkirk District Council was responsible for all aspects of development, including planning policies, local plans, and planning control over individual buildings. Planning takes account of issues such as the environment, neighbourhood concerns, town planning and development. Until 1997 the main legislation was the Town and Country Planning (Scotland) Act 1947 with subsequent amendments. The Planning section did not deal with standards of construction which are subject to separate legislation and are dealt with by the Building Control section of Falkirk District Council. The Planning section was part of Falkirk District Council's Strategic Services Department from 1975-1996.
