County of Stirling Finding Aid

This finding aid contains lists of records of some of the predecessor local authorities in geographical area of Falkirk Council. These include records of Stirling County Councils, the relevant Stirling County District Councils and joint local authorities.

Most of the records of the County of Stirling are held by Stirling Council Archives, 5 Borrowmeadow Rd, Springkerse Industrial Estate, Stirling. However, some records which relate to the area now served by Falkirk Council have been disaggregated from Stirling and are held in Falkirk so that the records can be held as locally as possible.

It should be noted that the main series of Stirling County valuation and electoral rolls are held in Stirling because it is not possible to separate these volumes. These include information on Polmont, Slamannan, Larbert, Bonnybridge and other areas.

Stirling County Council

Stirling County Council was set up in 1889 under the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889 and abolished in 1975 by the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1973. Its powers were transferred to Central Regional Council and to Falkirk District Council and Stirling District Council.

County councils were established by the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889 (52 & 53 Vict. c. 50). County councils were made up of elected councillors and took over powers from the commissioners of supply, county road trusts, and local authorities set up under the Diseases of Animals' Acts. They also took over some administrative powers from the justices of the peace but not their licensing or judicial powers. The responsibilities of the commissioners of supply for police matters were transferred to standing joint committees made up of commissioners of supply and county councillors. Parochial boards who had been responsible for duties under the Public Health Acts had such powers transferred to district committees of county councils. The 1889 Act made it compulsory for county councils to appoint full time county medical officers of health and sanitary inspectors. Further reform of county councils came in the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1929 (19 & 20 Geo. V, c. 25). The 1929 Act changed some of the functions of county councils and set up a system of district councils which had certain functions assigned to them by the county council. County councils were abolished in 1975 by the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1973 (c. 65). The powers of county councils were transferred to regional councils and district councils.

The records of the County Council are held in Stirling Council Archives. Some of these records relate to the area now served by Falkirk Council. Various records have been transferred to Falkirk.

Stirling County Council. Treasurer's Department

County councils were obliged to have county funds into which all receipts of the county, from whatever source, were paid. Payments were made to the county treasurer, who provided information about the county's financial affairs to its finance committee. The finance committee presented annually to the county council a budget containing estimated income and expenditure of the county fund, and provisions for raising the sum required to bridge the gap between the income and expenditure. Rates levied on the gross annual value of lands and heritages as they appeared on the Valuation Roll were required from ratepayers to meet any deficiency between the county's income and expenditure. Annual accounts of income and expenditure were compiled and presented for audit by an appropriate officer. The abstracts of accounts provide a summary overview of all the council's financial dealings.

Valuation Rolls were first compiled in 1855 as a result of the Lands Valuation (Scotland) Act 1854 and produced annually from 1855 to 1988. Separate rolls were compiled for burghs and for counties. Parochial boards also compiled assessment rolls. They were used to establish the rateable value of property which provided the basis for local taxation and assessments on local services. Following local government re-organisation valuation rolls became the responsibility of Regional Councils. The valuation system was abolished in 1989 and replaced by the Community Charge. The valuation rolls for the County of Stirling are held in Stirling Council Archives. Those held in Falkirk Archives are duplicates.

Following the Local Authorities (Scotland) Act 1929, County Councils took over responsibilities previously held by Parish Councils. The Parish Councils were abolished and District Councils were set up. The final accounts of Parish Councils within the County of Stirling were transferred to County Treasurer. This series has been divided between Stirling Council Archives and Falkirk archives.

Stirling County Council. Education Department

The Education (Scotland) Act 1918 established education authorities in every county to administer education on a county wide basis. School boards were abolished and replaced with school management committees for the management of individual schools or groups of schools. The functions of the education authority were transferred to county councils under the terms of the Local Authority (Scotland) Act, 1929. School management committees were replaced with education sub-committees or local education sub-committees by the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1947. The Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1973 transferred the duties of county councils for education to regional councils in 1975.

As education was a county and then a regional responsibility, records of the education authority are held in Stirling Council Archives. A duplicate series of minutes has been deposited in Falkirk Archives.

For full details of records of schools and education authorities please see the Education Finding Aid.

Stirling County Council. Central No 2 District Council

District councils in Scotland were set up in 1930 as part of the provisions of the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1929 (19 & 20 Geo. V, c. 25). Their powers differed from those of the district councils which existed from 1975 to 1996. They were formed in counties according to a scheme drawn up by each county council. They were composed partly of elected district councillors and partly of county councillors from the electoral divisions of the district. District councils replaced many of the functions of parish councils and district committees abolished by the 1929 Act. District councils often had various responsibilities delegated to them by the county council under a scheme of delegation drawn up the county. These responsibilities often included the letting of houses and the upkeep of cemeteries. Many district councils also administered poor relief until 1948 under a scheme of delegation but this function was taken away by the National Assistance Act, 1948 (11 & 12 Geo. VI, c. 64) which transferred such provisions to central government. District councils also administered special districts or committees responsible for certain functions such as scavenging or water provision financed by additional rates. District councils were abolished in 1975 by the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1973 (c. 65).

Central District No 2 covered the areas of Denny, Dunipace and Kilsyth Parish Councils and part of the landward area of Falkirk Parish Council. The area therefore included Denny, Banknock, Bonnybridge, Dennyloanhead, Haggs, Longcroft, Fankerton, Dunipace, Torwood, Castlecary, High Bonnybridge and Seabegs (also Banton and Queenzieburn)

Stirling County Council. Eastern No 3 District Council

District councils in Scotland were set up in 1930 as part of the provisions of the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1929 (19 & 20 Geo. V, c. 25). Their powers differed from those of the district councils which existed from 1975 to 1996. They were formed in counties according to a scheme drawn up by each county council. They were composed partly of elected district councillors and partly of county councillors from the electoral divisions of the district. District councils replaced many of the functions of parish councils and district committees abolished by the 1929 Act. District councils often had various responsibilities delegated to them by the county council under a scheme of delegation drawn up the county. These responsibilities often included the letting of houses and the upkeep of cemeteries. Many district councils also administered poor relief until 1948 under a scheme of delegation but this function was taken away by the National Assistance Act, 1948 (11 & 12 Geo. VI, c. 64) which transferred such provisions to central government. District councils also administered special districts or committees responsible for certain functions such as scavenging or water provision financed by additional rates. District councils were abolished in 1975 by the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1973 (c. 65).

Eastern No 3 covered the area of Slamannan and Muiravonside Parishes.
